DRYEST FEBRUARY FOR MANY YEARS

"The rainfall during February was generally very light with the result that all streams are very low," says G. K. Harrison, superintendent of hydrography, in his report for last month. "While all reports from other islands have not been received, indications point to the driest February in a long period of years. All streams on Oahu are at the lowest discharge recorded in the past three years."

"Should the 1914 summer season follow its usual regime, indications point to a great shortage of water, and water users should plan for such a condition."

Having related the details of himself and staff in the month's work, Mr. Harrison concludes with a summary of stream gauging stations which shows 31 on Kauai, 40 on Oahu, 43 on Maui and one on Hawaii, the last-mentioned being the Kona investigation station. Two of the Oahu stations were established in February.

Mow Chan, a Chinese held by the immigration authorities here for deportation, whose long fight to remain in this country has attracted the attention of officials here, in San Francisco and Washington, caused a writ of habeas corpus to be issued this morning. He is now held in custody by the federal immigration officers, who plan to return him to China. Mow maintains that he was born in Honolulu in 1898, and that he went to China several years later. He says he returned here December 16, 1913, on the steamer Persia, and was denied the right to land. On his claim of being born here he bases his contention that he is not subject to deportation.
